Here is the examiner's comment:

The first line of the response is copied from the rubric, except for the words [lot of]. No credit is given for copied wording from the question.

The reasons given for hiring a personal trainer are not always clear. Although the last paragraph recommends that people hire one, the response focuses on the benefit for the individual rather than giving a more general analysis. The final three paragraphs are written in the first person, stating the candidate's preference.

There is a lack of overall progression and the response is quite repetitive. There are some cohesive devices, but they are quite simple [Also | because | On the other hand]. Inaccurate referencing can be confusing [Other people ... they] and there is considerable repetition because of the lack of referencing [a personal fitness trainer].

Much of the vocabulary is taken from the question. There is limited control of vocabulary and errors in usage [spotlight / in the spotlight] and word formation [cooker / cook] cause some difficulty for the reader. The candidate repeats inaccurate modal structures [should perfect / should have a perfect | can more than | can not more advice | can not hiring]. Generally, the level of error in sentence structure is high and limits the score for grammar.

Overall, ideas, vocabulary and grammatical structures are limited and for a higher Band Score, main ideas need to be presented more clearly.
